Job Description

As a member of the client support team, you will respond to clients inquiries about data and analytics to inform trading decisions, manage risk, and gain insights into various financial markets. You will be an integral part of the company's front-line support team.

Client Details

Our client is a financial services company that provides market data and analytics for various asset classes to support financial market participants in making informed decisions.

Description

As a member of the client support team, you will respond to clients inquiries about data and analytics to inform trading decisions, manage risk, and gain insights into various financial markets. You will be an integral part of the company's front-line support team. Among the main responsibilities:

- Customer Support: analyze issues and respond to customers inquiries both reactively and proactively

- Keep the customer informed on the status of all open inquiries
- Gain a deep understanding of the market data products, architecture, and customer base
- Work closely with product, development, and QA to serve as the voice of the customer internally and drive resolution of issues
- Identify trends to address with the client or internally to improve client experience and workflow

Job Offer

- A constant opportunity to learn even at Senior levels
- A clear promotion path and internal transfers opportunities
- International transfer options to move to a different office located abroad
- A very tight Team focused on personal development
- The company is very much about evolution and progress
