Job Description

Company Profile

- A European headquartered financial services company with a rich history and strong presence in Japan.

The Role

- You will be leading 5-7 projects simultaneously of varying duration (anything from 3 months - 2 years is typical), primarily focusing on system implementation.
- Whilst the role is mostly dealing with internal stakeholders, around 20% of your time will be spent directly with customers.
- You'll have the chance to work with multinational stakeholders (the internal PM team is very diverse), Japanese customers, and offshore development teams.
- You can also expect to spend around 10% of your time on non-IT related projects; working on improving business processes for the Japan region, so it's an opportunity to get exposure to a range of tasks.

Your Skills

- Fluent Japanese and Business level English are a must for this role as you'll work with Japanese customers and international stakeholders alike.
- This role would suit an applications-focused PM who has at least a basic understanding of IT infrastructure (but you do not need to be an expert in this area).
- Candidates from any industry are welcome, though knowledge of the financial services sector would be a plus.

Location

Tokyo

Salary

10 - 12 million yen

Selling points

- Hybrid work style - only one day a week in the office.
- Join a multicultural and multilingual internal project management team (the manager is the only Japanese person on this particular team).
- Work on a wide range of tasks, giving you exposure to areas such as process improvement/transformation that IT roles typically do not allow for.
- Join a stable multinational company who are one of the key players in their industry in Japan and have a strong history here. You'll be working for a brand that has global recognition.
