募集要項

Company Profile

- A European-headquartered data analytics firm that helps its customers make better decisions by using AI to give context to their data.

The Role

- As Project Manager, you will be working with both technical and business stakeholders to drive the delivery and implementation of the company's data analytics platform into the customers' existing IT landscape.
- You'll be ensuring that these large, complex, and data-driven projects are being completed to agile methodologies, preparing the scope of work, ensuring project delivery to time/budget.
- As the company has only recently entered Japan, the local team is small (4 people) - we will need an experienced person who is a self-starter for this position.

Your Skills

- Fluent Japanese and English are required for this role - you will be working directly with customers, so 敬語 / formal language will be needed.
- This role will suit an experienced Project Manager who is knowledgeable about the SDLC and has system / software implementation experience.

Location

Tokyo

Salary

18 - 22 million yen

Selling points

- Be a key player in an innovative and rapidly growing data analytics company which helps its customers to make better decisions; for example, reducing the risk of financial crime such as fraud or money laundering.
- The company is entering the Japan market and already have signed major contracts which now must be delivered on - they have multiple headcounts and can offer a combination of flexible work styles and very competitive salaries.
- Work from outside of Japan for up to 2 months of the year.
- International work environment - you'll need to communicate with head office and other regions frequently, in addition to local Japanese customers.
- Excellent in-house training on the company's platform and services to ensure you are well equipped to deal with customers.
